

STATISTICIANS & DATA SCIENTISTS REQUIRED

Who are we looking for?

RSMB are looking for self-motivated high-achieving statisticians and data scientists to join the team.

We are recruiting individuals at all levels who can deliver innovative and creative solutions by utilising their impressive analytical and interpretative skills. We anticipate that the successful candidates, in addition to being academically well qualified, will be able to demonstrate relevant and tangible experience of dealing with large data sets, finding solutions for complex problems and show an acute eye for detail. Understanding the importance of maintaining RSMB's high standards of work is an obvious additional prerequisite.

RSMB offer competitive salaries based on experience plus an extensive range of other benefits.

Our team, which currently comprises 38 people many of whom are statisticians, IT experts or project managers, are based in modern offices in the heart of Central London.

The Company

RSMB Limited is a specialist company providing customised statistical research solutions and consultancy services to the media industry. We are market leaders in television audience measurement. We have extensive experience of both traditional and digital audience measurement as well as being internationally respected practitioners in data fusion and cross-media integration.

What do we do?

RSMB holds key long-term contracts with BARB and RAJAR, the organisations responsible for providing the official measurements of UK television and radio audiences. We work with similar organisations in Europe and further afield as well as directly for media owners, media agencies and advertisers.

RSMB's core services occupy the field of design, methodology and quality control of traditional survey and panel research. We are currently enjoying increased demand for our statistical modelling, technical consultancy and data fusion expertise reflecting the increasing complexity of measuring media consumption in the data-driven digital age.
